Deal Devil

A deal with the devil (also called a Faustian bargain or Mephistophelian bargain) is a cultural motif in European folklore, best exemplified by the legend of Faust and the figure of Mephistopheles, as well as being elemental to many Christian traditions. According to traditional Christian belief about witchcraft, the pact is between a person and Satan or a lesser demon.

The Bible never records an account of a human being bargaining with Satan or demons. The Bible does depict the devil as a deal-maker, however. It's just that he is shown attempting to make deals with God Himself as opposed to mere mortals. In the book of Job, for instance, Satan proposes a kind of wager with God.

Modern Western culture has created the myth of "deals with the devil" as an exchange in which the Devil provides mankind with an otherwise unreachable need in exchange for a human soul. Eternal youth, avoiding death, an empire of luxury and riches, or the love of a certain person.

Can you make a deal in hell? How to summon the Devil

The television series Reaper is about a young man, Sam Oliver, whose parents made a deal with the devil to save the father from a serious illness in exchange for the soul of their firstborn child (although, in their defence, they attempted to abstain from conception to prevent Satan from receiving anything). He must now work as Satan's bounty hunter, or his

Deals with the Devil in popular culture
- Wikipedia

One very pervasive element and motif of various tales and folklore around the world is the concept of making a deal with the Devil, or some similarly powerful demon, wherein a pact is formed typically involving an exchange of one's soul for a myriad of sinister, diabolical favors such as fame, wealth, power, youth, vigor, or exceptional skill in a profession.
