Fingerpicking Pattern 1. This first fingerpicking pattern is both simple and elegant, and it fits right in with a wide variety of musical styles. The use of the bass note on beats one and three and the two-note chord on beats two and four give this a boom-and-chick-and-boom-and-chick-and sound. I have notated it below in both standard and tablature notation.

* WHEN CHANGING CHORDS the fingerpicking pattern doesn't actually change, but the strings you choose to pick will certainly vary--especially the thumb. A general rule is to pick the first note (with your thumb) with the root note for each chord. So for a C-chord, the thumb picks the C-note (3rd fret/5th string) and then the E-note (second fret/4th string); sometimes the thumb alternates with the ...
