Why Business Matters to God: And What Still Needs to Be ...

Why Business Matters to God is a major development in the theology of work. Van Duzer realistically applies the best theological materials to the actual practice of business. You could actually make business decisions based on his arguments. He works within the market system, but he assesses it not by its own idolatries but by God's word.

Why Business Matters to God (And What Still Needs to Be ...

It was hard to distinguish between business mattering to God and business mattering to a moral agnostic. Two things stood out: one, that business has been created by God for good, i.e. it's not an exclusive evil realm for the greedy; and two, it's okay to do the best we can as business people "straining to live within these limits."

Why Business Matters to God: And What Still Needs to Be ...

Business is a social construct and God cares a lot about how it is constructed. A theology of business needs to be sophisticated enough so that it can look at the structures/paradigms of business and hold them up against God's values. Where they are out of line we can call the way of business to a realignment with those values.
